

THE BURNHAM FOUNDATION

Why Legacies are so Important

Leaving a legacy is a way of saying a big thank you for the pleasure gained from your association with Burnham.

Leaving a legacy is one of the important decisions in anyone's life when they start to reflect on what has been important to them in their life and what they would like to ensure is shared by future generations.

As we approach old age we are all concerned with ensuring that we have enough wealth to live a comfortable life but our perspective must change as we approach the end of our life. Our wealth is of no value to ourselves when we have died and yet a legacy can make a valuable contribution to the community in which we have enjoyed living.

Whilst The Burnham Foundation are keen to gain your financial support, it is also committed to seeking out guidance and support for anyone starting to think about tackling all those issues associated with the end of one's life.
